OFFICIAL

Thanks, [REDACTED]!

I did pass on your media line and email – and so that you might be able to provide some general commentary.

H [REDACTED]

You can refer it to us if you want. We can talk around wagering services and advertising but if they are looking for comment around gambling and children we won't have anything to say.

Hi [REDACTED]

Thanks for picking this up. The platform is pretty new but we are pretty keen to get the eSafety Commissioner's comments on the platform.

There is a specific category you can navigate to from the homepage called "gambling" (<https://kick.com/categories/gambling>) and the founders of Kick.com also own an online gambling business called Stake.com.

So, the question is: Popular live streamers on Kick are gambling money live on stream. Does this platform induce children to gamble? What are eSafety Commissioners guidelines for platforms to prevent children from being exposed to gambling content?

My deadline is COB today. Is Julie around today for a chat? Or early tomorrow morning?

Thanks,

██████████

Hi ██████████

I have taken this one off ██████████ as he has a few balls in the air.

Last time I checked, we had not received any reports re: this site.

But let me double check that is still the case.

Kind regards,

You don't often get email from ██████████. Learn why this is important

Hi ██████████

I hope you are well.

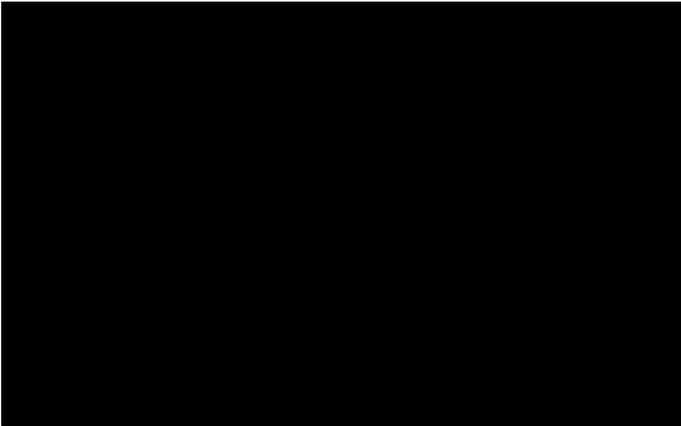

Have you come across the live streaming platform Kick.com?

We are interested in the company because one of its founders is an Australian ██████████ and this stunt in Brisbane made the US news recently.

I was wondering if Kick has popped up on the eSafety Commissioner's radar, and if she's had a look into its content and how it compares to the likes of Twitch and Youtube?

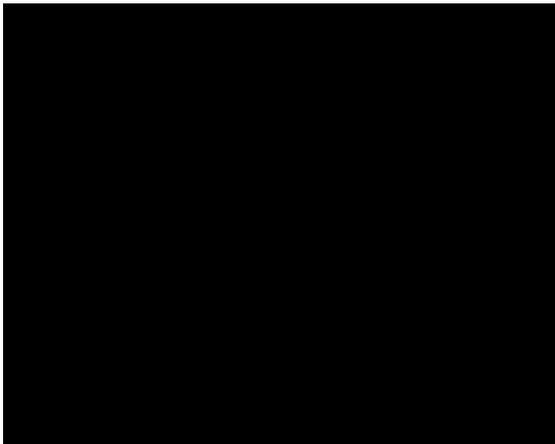

Could you please give me a call on Tuesday to discuss?

Thanks,
